Kaczynski sentenced to life

Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Unflinching and unrepentant, Unabomber Theodore Kaczynski was given four life sentences Monday as the families of his victims prayed aloud for his eternal damnation and demanded that he be locked up "so far down that when he dies he'll be closer to hell."

"He's diabolical, evil, cunning, a murderer," said Susan Mosser, whose husband, Thomas Mosser, died before her eyes in New Jersey after he opened a bomb sent by Kaczynski.

The outcome of the sentencing was never in doubt: U.S. District Judge Garland Burrell Jr. gave the 55-yearold former mathematician four life sentences plus 30 years, as spelled out in a plea bargain reached in January. Kaczynski's plea spared him the death penalty and a trial in which his lawyers planned to portray him, against his will, as deranged.

When given a chance to address the court, Kaczynski, the man whose 35,000-word manifesto against the evils of technology filled eight newspaper pages, spoke only briefly, offering no apologies and no explanations.

He strode to a courtroom lectern and, in a high-pitched nasal voice, complained that the government had lied about his anti-technology philosophy and was "discrediting me personally."

"I ask only that people reserve judgment on me and the Unabomber case," Kaczynski said. He said he would explain his motives at a future

The plea bargain covered the three deaths and the mainings of two sci entists. As part of the plea bargain, Kaczynski acknowledged responsibility for all of the Unabomber attacks.

After months of delays on the issue, the Provo City Council is scheduled to make a decision on the Seven Peaks housing development Wednesday at 5:30 p.m.

However, a letter from Assistant Attorney General Brian Farr to Provo City Council attorney Neil Lindberg may cause a further delay. Farr requested that Provo City not take any action until after a staff review, scheduled in his office for May 12. The letter indicated there would be a review of "a few issues related to the Seven Peaks property" by a group of attorneys.

Farr was unavailable for comment Monday, but Scott Ferrin, a BYU professor of educational leadership and foundations and a member of the group Concerned Families of Provo, said he had tried to get the attorney general to consider the matter and that he thought it was only wise to take a closer look at what had happened with the history of the land.

Concerned Families of Provo was organized to protest the proposed development. The group has pointed out many potential problems with the way the land has changed hands in the

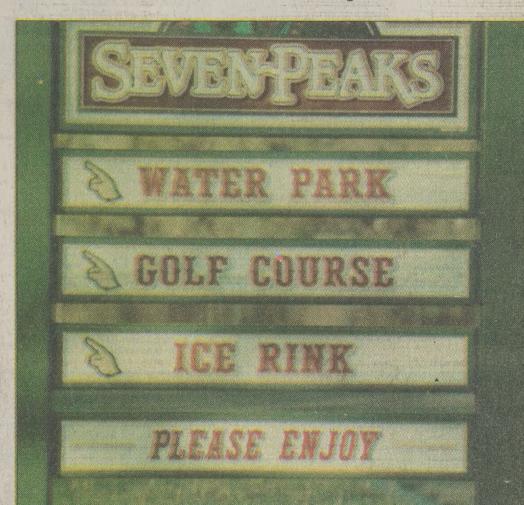

The group discovered a clause that once existed in a deed on the property indicating that if the land was not developed as a ski resort, as was originally planned, the land would revert back to the city.

Clintons like Chelsea's new boyfriend

SAN JOSE, Calif. — The young man seen with Chelsea Clinton during the president's weekend visit to Stanford University is a religious studies major and champion swimmer.

In a telephone interview with the San Jose Mercury News, Matthew Pierce dentified himself as Chelsea Clinton's boyfriend, the newspaper reported

President Clinton may have had that boyfriend in mind Monday morning when, at a breakfast in Los Angeles, he gestured toward an acquaintance and volunteered to the audience that the man's daughter recently married. "He assures me it is survivable, but I am not so certain," Clinton said with a chuck-

According to a biography provided by the Stanford Athletic Department, Pierce is a 20-year-old junior from The Woodlands, Texas, a small city north of Houston. He was a National Merit Scholar and is majoring in religious studies. In March, Pierce won the 200-meter butterfly to help Stanford capture this year's NCAA men's swimming championship. He also competed in the backstroke and participated in the 1996 U.S. Olympic trials. Pierce accompanied the Clintons at a nondenominational service Sunday at the ornate Stanford Memorial Church. Sitting in the front pew, the Clintons sang hymns and watched as a dozen children were baptized.

Pierce later joined the family for lunch at a Palo Alto restaurant and as they entered, Clinton put his arm around Pierce.

20 Muslims killed in bus accident

NEW DELHI, India — A bus crowded with Muslim pilgrims hit overhead electricity wires in northern India on Monday, killing at least 20 people, Press Trust of India news agency said.

Eight children were among those killed. The accident occurred when a bicycle fastened to the top of the bus hit the wires in Chandausi, a town in Uttar Pradesh state, 125 miles southeast of New Delhi, PTI said.

The bus was carrying 70 pilgrims traveling from New Delhi to Sitamarhi in Bihar state for a religious function. Three suffered burn injuries, PTI said.

Czech president resumes duties

INNSBRUCK, Austria — For the first time since he was hospitalized three weeks ago, Czech President Vaclav Havel resumed his official duties Monday, from his hospital bed.

Doctors disconnected Havel from all intravenous tubes, and he posed for photographers as he signed an order promoting seven senior army officers, the Austrian Press Agency reported.

Havel is scheduled to leave Austria on Wednesday to go to Prague, where he will be put in a military hospital, APA said.

Havel was released Saturday from an intensive care unit at an Innsbruck hospital, where he underwent emergency surgery last month for a ruptured colon and acute peritonitis while vacationing in the Austrian Alps.

His recovery was complicated by breathing problems after phlegm blocked his windpipe, forcing doctors to perform a tracheotomy. The medical team in charge of Havel said the hole in his throat would be closed Monday.

Wife keeps dead husband at home

TARRAGONA, Spain — Neighbors became worried when an elderly resident was seen consistently without her husband — and then suspicious when a pungent smell wafted from their door.

They had good reason.

The woman had kept her 82-year-old husband in a wardrobe for six weeks in their apartment after he died, police spokesman Manuel Reano said Monday.

The autopsy showed that Juan Jose Perez Fernandez died of natural causes in mid-March. His body was discovered last week, Reano said.

His wife, identified only as Ana Maria, was admitted to a psychiatric hospital in Tarragona, a northeastern Spanish city.

"They were a very united couple without children," Reano said. "It is a love

Longer phone conversations releas

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Accused of omitting evidence favorable to Webster Hubbell, a House chairman released on Monday extensive tapes of prison telephone calls in which President Clinton's close friend described how he came to work for a controversial Indonesian family but insisted no one had bought his silence in the Whitewater investigation.

"We know that's not true," Hubbell told his wife, Suzy, in one comment about hush-money allegations that had been edited out of tape excerpts released last week by Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind.

The more complete recordings detail Hubbell's fears of more prison time, his disdain for independent counsel Kenneth Starr and his refusal to betray friends like Hillary Clinton, suggesting he found it difficult to say negative things about anyone.

"You know me, I have a hard time saying anything bad about the devil," Hubbell said in one previously unreleased section of a conversation he had with his sister.

Republicans on Burton's House Government Reform and Oversight Committee made a splash late last week by releasing select portions of the recorded calls in which Hubbell and his wife discussed White House pressures to protect Mrs. Clinton.

Democrats fought back over the weekend, disclosing deleted remarks in those same conversations in which Hubbell said that he did not know of anything the first lady had done

On Monday, the Democrats sent a letter to each committee member listing 10 pages of examples of "alterations and omissions" in Burton's original release that they said showed Burton's original released was skewed to put Hubbell in the worst light.

They alleged that some of the verbatim quotes in Burton's original transcripts "do not appear anywhere in the tapes" and that passages "were deleted that appear to be exculpatory of Mr. Hubbell.

An angry Burton refused to step down as chairman as some Democrats demanded, and said concerns about protecting some of Hubbell's privacy, not partisan efforts to embarrass him, were behind the selective release.

"When you've got 150 hours of tapes and you've got to condense it down to an hour, obviously you're going to do some things that some people are going to be concerned about," Burton said.

Hubbell's phone conversations from late 1995 through early 1997, when he was in a Cumberland, Md., federal prison for defrauding his law firm and clients, were routinely recorded, like other inmates. Hubbell was aware he was being recorded. House investigators and Whitewater prosecutors subsequently obtained the tapes as part of their investigations.

Last week, Burton's staff released a transcript of Hubbell discussing allegations in the press in 1996 that some consulting fees he might have received from presidential friends amounted to hush money to discourage his cooperation with the Whitewater investigation.

On Monday, the full tape recording showed the following selection had been deleted right from the middle of the Burton transcript: "I'll give you a hypothetical, is that most of the articles are presupposing that I - my silence - is being bought. We know that's not true."

In another tape released Monday, Hubbell is heard describing to his lawyer what he has refused to explain publicly - how he came to earn $100,000 from the Lippo empire owned by the Riady family of Indonesia, major Clinton supporters.

In that tape, Hubbell suggested that former Commerce Department official John Huang helped set up and attend early meetings that led to that work. At the time, Hubbell said, Huang was still working for Lippo and had not started his job in the Clinton administration.

He also disclosed that James Riady, son of the Lippo patriach, wanted him to go to Indonesia.

"And as James was encouraging me to come to Indonesia until John was working for Lippo. He was the contact person in trying to set that up and arrange it," Hubbell explained.

President Merrill J. Bateman announced Monday the appointment of Noel B. Reynolds as the associate academic vice president for undergraduate studies at BYU. He will replace John S. Tanner, who has been named the new chair of the English Department.

"Noel Reynolds and John Tanner have both established themselves as fine scholars, teachers and administrators," Bateman said in a news release. "We are fortunate that they are willing to devote exceptional service to the university."

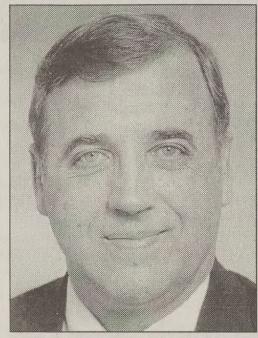

A professor of political science, Reynolds received his master's and doctoral degrees from Harvard University. He has published widely, with an emphasis on legal philosophy and authorship studies.

At BYU, he has served as the associate academic vice president for university education and chair of the Department of Philosophy.

As director of general education in 1980-81, Reynolds played a key role in designing and implementing BYU's current GE program. "I now welcome the opportunity to return to my earlier focus on the undergraduate educational programs at BYU," he said in a news release.

"While BYU already provides a premier undergraduate educational program, there are many important challenges and opportunities yet to be met and pursued. I expect in the near future to see BYU serving the undergraduate needs of the LDS community in more extensive and innovative ways," he said.

Elder Hales speaks on honor

By TONIA ANDRUS tonia@du2.byu.edu Associate Campus Editor

Elder Robert D. Hales spoke about honor as he addressed Air Force cadets and more than 100,000 college-age young adults via satellite in a Church Education System Fireside on Sunday.

Elder Hales, who served as a jet fighter pilot in the Air Force, compared aerial missions to the lives of young adults. He used his Air Force slogan "Return With Honor" to remind church members to return with honor to their Heavenly Father.

Elder Hales spoke of the instrument panel in airplanes and how pilots must follow these guides in order to complete their missions. He said just as the compass keeps a pilot on course, the Holy Ghost will give direction to people.

Elder Hales counseled people to check their "fuel gauge" and refuel daily through prayer, service and scripture reading.

Just as the altimeter is used to judge the altitude necessary to avoid obstacles, young pilots must take higher ground to avoid worldly obstacles and Satan's storms, Elder Hales said.

Elder Hales cited a study on 700 airplane accidents, which showed that 95 percent came from four areas of pilot error: a sense of invulnerability, machoism, disregard for authority and impulsivity.

Invulnerability causes people to think they are immune to consequences, said Elder Hales. This leads to selective obedience instead of obeying all of the commandments.

Machoism leads people to do things to look bigger in the eyes of others, said Elder Hales. He said a true friend makes it easier to live the command-

Pilots who disregard authority don't follow flight plans and hate being told what to do. The Lord gave people commandments because he loves them, said Elder Hales.

Impulsive pilots act without thinking. If people will remember who they are and where they are going, they can prevent many disasters in their lives, Elder Hales said.

"Elder Hales said that honoring God is giving him glory and trusting him, and that we show this through our obedience and paying our tithes and offerings," said John Bradshaw, 22, a junior from Elkhart, Ind., majoring in Russian.

Elder Hales' voice swelled with emotion as he thanked military service men and women for defending freedom. He also thanked the Air Force for the invitation to address the cadets and said the Air Force chapel where the CES Fireside was held was a symbol of freedom of religion.

Y baseball suffers loss to Utah Tennis team

By BEN WESTERBY email:ben@du2.byu.edu Universe Sports Writer

BYU's baseball team was shut out last weekend in a three game series against the University of Utah at Franklin Quest Field.

Last week's losses place BYU four games away from first place in the Western Athletic Conference North Division.

More than 1,000 fans from BYU and Utah attended Saturday's game. Nine different players from BYU contributed to BYU's 13 runs, but even 13 runs were no match for Utah's 19. BYU had more hits overall, but also had more errors.

With the wins, Utah improves to 19-30 overall, 9-18 in the WAC. The Cougars fall to 27-23, 11-16 in the WAC. Grand Canyon University has an identical overall record as BYU, but leads the North Division because its WAC record is 15-12.

BYU began Saturday's game strong with three home runs in the irst inning, and even opened up a 5lead.

Utah came back strong at the botom of the second inning and dominated the rest of the game with another 19 hits.

BYU's Troy McNaughton hit a solo shot in the fourth and seventh nning. Senior Brad Winget also had double in the eighth inning.

Thursday's and Friday's games ooth started out slow for BYU. The Cougars struggled to keep up with Jtah throughout both games.

Both teams had 15 hits Friday, but BYU finished five runs behind Utah. Ryan Pond scored BYU's first run in he fifth inning, but by that time Utah ad a 7-0 lead.

The final score was Utah 13, BYU

The opening game of the series ended in a 16-7 loss for BYU. Sophomore Spencer Oborn, who was ecently named WAC Player of the Week, had two doubles. Another ophomore, Will Waldrip, led the eam with two home runs.

BYU has three games this week-

The No. 8 BYU women's tennis team trounced UNLV Saturday to win its fifth WAC Tennis Title, and improve to 22-2 overall.

The Cougars entered the tournament ranked eighth nationally, and as the WAC's No. 1 seed. Sweeping all their matches against UNLV without dropping a set, the Cougars didn't disappoint their ranking.

Five straight-set victories in singles were all the team needed. No. 4 singles player Jodi Richardson didn't even need to finish her match, as the other singles victories clinched the conference title.

"Everyone played superbly," said head coach Clark Barton in a news release. "I was pleased with the solid tennis we got from all our players."

The Cougars began the tournament on Wednesday with an easy victory over Air Force. All six singles players won in straight sets.

Kim Kelly, Tara Ferguson and No. 1 singles player Holly Parkinson each won their matches 6-0, 6-0.

"It was a good start for us in the tournament," Barton said in a news The Cougars defeated the Fresno Bulldogs 6-0, then went on to beat Tulsa 5-1 in the semifinals. BYU's only loss in the entire tournament came in the semi-finals when Parkinson was defeated by Tulsa's Anousjka Van Exal by a score of 6-4, 6-1.

"This Tulsa girl is ranked in the top 40 and she has the type of shots that really gave Holly some trouble," Barton said in a news release. "Anousjka played really well and Holly struggled a bit."

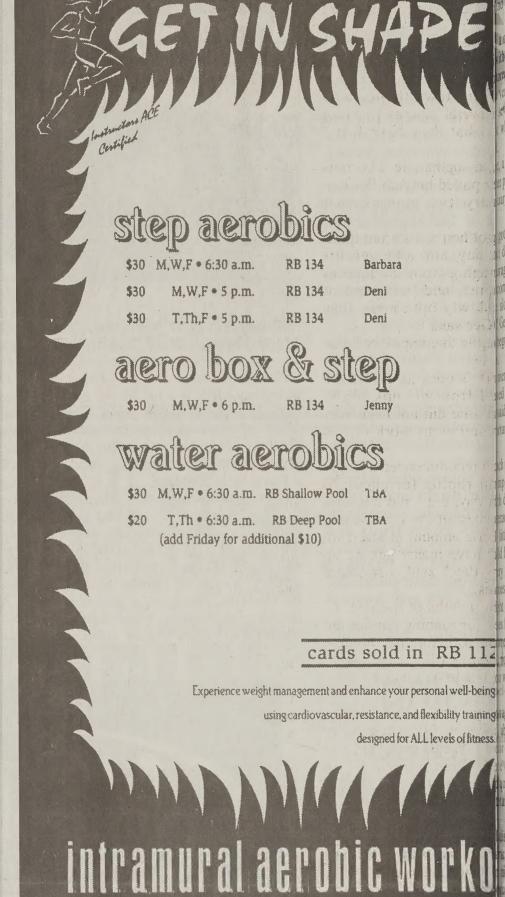

The team is waiting for new rankings to be released today. If it is ranked in the top 10, it will receive an automatic bid to the NCAA Championships held in South Bend, Ind., later this month.

With the Cougars' high ranking and exceptional performance at the WAC Championships, they are expected to receive a top 10 bid and a chance to skip the regional tour-

BYU sophomore Randall Himes clears a hurdle during the 100-meter hurdle race April 10 at the BYU Invitational. Himes is one of many BYU athletes who has made the return to Division I athletic competition after serving an LDS mission.

"There were five of us leaving at the same time, and they told all of us to take a jump rope when we left and to jump rope every morning an night and to do sit-ups and push-ups, too," said Tasha Bushnell, a junior from Philomath, Ore.

Out of the five who left on missions at the same time as Bushnell, she said she is the only one competing so far.

One girl is out with an injury right now, and the other three have dropped out because it was so discouraging.

"The coaches always tell us it takes a year to get back into shape and to not get discouraged from all the work it takes, but people usually do become really discouraged," Bushnell said.

Hirschi said that athletically speaking, skills do not come back overnight.

"With track, it is a little different than other sports because the athletes are always running and pounding on the track. Other sports have an ebb and flow, but track keeps the athletes always on the go until the event is over," Hirschi said.

Hirschi said even though the athletes become more converted to the gospel than to keeping in shape on their missions, he believes that focusing on mission is where their priorities should be. He understands how circumstances do not always allow missionaries to run around the block. He said he is always willing to work with the athletes when they return.

"We encourage the kids to go ... the kids will be blessed for teaching the gospel, and our program here will survive through it all ... But they will have to work hard when they come back to get back to a competing level."

Test can tell if pregnant women will deliver early

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Pregnant women are about to get a new test to help determine if they're at risk for premature labor — by measuring a hormone in their saliva.

Biex Inc.'s SalEst saliva test works best in identifying women who are not at risk, the Food and Drug Administration said. A woman can simply take a saliva sample at home and mail it to a laboratory for screening.

But SalEst has a much higher error rate when it suggests a woman is about to enter preterm labor. Those women need further examination, the FDA cautioned.

"Its strength is its ability to rule out premature labor," said FDA clinical testing chief Dr. Steve Gutman.

The FDA approved the test Thursday. The test, for women between their 22nd and 36th weeks of pregnancy, detects the hormone estriol, which can surge several weeks before preterm labor. SalEst will be available within six weeks for under $100. Women who test positive are supposed to get a repeat test, not included in the origi-

Risks include carrying more than one fetus, previous preterm labor or high blood pressure. But about half the time, women have no obvious risks — and many women, who doctors think are at high risk, suffer all the anxiety yet wind up having a normal delivery. Another big problem: There's little doctors can do to prevent preterm labor, other than tell women to stop heavy lifting or prolonged standing. The saliva test was 98 percent reliable in identifying women not at risk for preterm labor, despite any other risk factors. But a positive test was much less reliable: 9 percent to 20 percent in pinpointing women about to go into labor. Doctors can't use SalEst alone, cautioned Dr. T. Murphy Goodwin of the University of Southern California, who researched the test.

Rats' cancer cured; will people be next?

Associated Press

BOSTON — A pharmaceutical company's stock price soared Monday after reports that a combination of drugs it plans to make has been proven to kill cancer in mice. The question remains whether it will work in humans.

The drugs — angiostatin and endostatin — work by cutting off the blood supply to cancerous tumors. Given intravenously to mice, the drugs have shrunk tumors and made them disappear altogether. The drugs also appear to prevent the spread of tumors.

Their innovator, Dr. Judah Folkman, a Harvard professor and researcher at Boston's Children's Hospital, called the combination of proteins "very promising," but cautioned that success might not carry over to human patients.

"We have to be careful with expectations," Folkman warned.

The director of the nation's top cancer research center called the initial studies on mice "remarkable and wonderful" and said he hopes to begin testing the drugs on small numbers of humans within a year.

"I am putting nothing on higher priority than getting this into clinical trials," Dr. Richard D. Klausner, director of the National Cancer Institute. told The New York Times.

Investors put their faith in the drugs' potential Monday. By early afternoon, shares of Entremed, the Rockville, Md., company that plans to make angiostatin and endostatin, had jumped 378 percent.

Cancer kills more than 500,000 Americans every year, according to Folkman. About 1.2 million people are diagnosed with the deadly disease every year, he said.

The development of the drugs which are protein fragments found in human blood — caps a 30-year research process that began when Folkman reasoned that tumors cannot grow or spread without a steady blood supply.

A decade ago, Folkman and other researchers developed a first generation of cancer-inhibiting drugs that slowed the growth of tumors in ani-

In experiments during the past five years, these early cancer inhibitors have been found to slow growth of tumors in human patients as well, Folkman said.

The new proteins take the cancer therapy one step further by eliminating the flow of blood to tumors, much like shutting off the water supply to a house. Furthermore, tumors do not become resistant to endostatin, as they can to chemotherapy drugs, Folkman said.

Although it is impossible to speculate on which types of human cancer might respond to the new drugs, Folkman said so far researchers have not found a form of cancer in mice they cannot beat.

Nobel laureate Dr. James Watson, who directs a cancer research center in New York, says Folkman's research may be as significant as Charles Darwin's.

Watson told the Times: "Judah is going to cure cancer in two years."

teetered between breakdown and breakthrough Monday, with process go to hell!" Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat declaring "today is the day, now is the moment" as Secretary of State Madeleine Albright met separately with him and Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

Netanyahu, who began the day saying he did not expect much progress, softened his tone after an unexpectedly long 4 1/2-hour meeting with the secretary of state. He said he anticipated meeting again Monday with cent. Albright and possibly with Arafat.

"We want to bring about a breakthrough. We also want to bring about an end to the conflict between the two peoples," Netanyahu said.

None of the officials commented on what progress was made in the talks. The Palestinian and Israeli first met separately with British Prime Minister Tony Blair and then in turn with Albright, the principal mediator.

"We are hoping for the best and preparing for the worst," said Albright's spokesman, James P. Rubin. But he warned that "there are grave risks of disillusionment and violence in the Middle East."

Outside Blair's Downing Street office, rival protesters shouted at each LONDON — Mideast peace talks other. Arab demonstrators waved black flags with the slogan "Peace

Five yards away, a small group of pro-Israelis shouted back, "Give peace a chance!"

Initial discussions were thought to center on a U.S. proposal for Israel to withdraw from an additional 13 percent of the West Bank. Israeli officials at first indicated no more than 9 percent of the land could be ceded to the Palestinians, but recently indicated Netanyahu may agree to 11 per-

Arafat has said if he does not get what he wants through negotiations. he will declare Palestinian statehood unilaterally next May, a step Netanyahu opposes.

Netanyahu said he and Albright would discuss a wide range of topics. "I expect we will cover all the issues," Netanyahu said. "I don't expect we will be able to make decisions on all of them. But on some issues, I think we can make progress ... if there is an equal willingness to move forward on the other side.'

Hard-line Israeli Parliament members have threatened to try to oust Netanyahu if he gives away more than 9 percent of the West Bank.

U.N. looks at media and complex issues

Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — The world's media are irresponsibly downplaying international news and reducing complex issues to "sound bites," said Mary Robinson, the U.N. high commissioner for human rights, at World Press Freedom Day on Monday.

"The lack of coverage of foreign news in mainstream national newspapers and broadcasts" could lead to a world where foreign policy is created in a "news vacuum," Robinson told a conference on press freedom.

The conference marked this year's 50th anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Article 19 of the declaration says, "Everyone has the right to freedom of opinion and expression."

James Ottaway, chairman of the U.N.'s World Press Freedom Committee, said Article 19 is "more honored around the world in the breach than in observance."

How will we advance other human rights?"

Robinson, a former Irish president, said it was vital for the media "not to reduce conflict situations to sound bites, and that is what is happening.'

The media must report complex international issues even at the risk of losing their audience, she said.

Andrei Codrescu, a professor at Louisiana State University who fled his native Romania during its communist era, said press freedom in the United States was threatened by "the extreme right wing," whose pressure on reporters has led to self-censor-

"Self-censorship leads to a decline of public interest in serious issues," Codrescu said. "When the majority of people do not take serious issues seriously, the enemies of freedom benefit because they take issues very, very seriously."
